

Figure S3. The invariant measures define a weighted network for each sample. The Wasserstein distance (EMD) calculates the most efficient way to move the distribution of invariant measures from one sample to another sample, where the cost is the shortest path in the network. Here, we show a small network for the purpose of illustration.