Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues, Microbial ecosystem is of paramount importance and is mighty dependent on human activities, environmental factors, stress, phytochemicals and antibiotics. The interactions of microbes, the host and the environment create a resilient ecosystem with a plasticity to evolve and alters its composition and its functions. Submissions of all articles (original research and reviews) with regards to different microbiomes, their functionality, prevention of diseases, targeted therapies, drugs, nutraceuticals and phytochemicals, epigenetics, antimicrobial properties and generally basic, preclinical and clinical studies covering this multilevel theme, are topics mostly welcome.
