Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

This Special Issue aims to provide a collection of articles to address the linkage between cognition, emotion, and behavior. Special attention will be provided to contributions addressing the interplay between cognition and emotion, as well as their influence on social cognition and social behavior. We particularly welcome multidisciplinary and interdisciplinary contributions, including research articles that involve clinical populations. These can be in the format of research articles, opinion/perspective articles, and review articles (narrative reviews, systematic reviews, and meta-analyses).
