Message from the Guest Editors

Potential topics of interest include but are not limited to enhanced recovery protocols, novel techniques concerning the surgical management of gynecologic oncology patients, novel aspects around immunonutrition, as well as predictive factors that may help to predict the course of these women. The issue covers the management of patients with ovarian, endometrial, cervical, vulvar, and breast cancer. We seek contributions in the form of original research articles and reviews, in hopes that leading experts will share their knowledge on the pathophysiology of perioperative recovery and the management of these patients.
