Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

Kidney disease is an important and common public health problem with increasing incidence and prevalence, high costs, and poor outcomes. To overcome this problem in the future, it is indispensable for us to explore and establish early detection and treatment methods for various kidney diseases, which include primary/secondary glomerulonephritis, rapidly progressive glomerulonephritis, nephrotic syndrome, acute kidney injury, diabetic nephropathy/diabetic kidney disease, chronic renal failure, renal fibrosis, and polycystic kidney disease.

This Special Issue aims to bring together a collection of original research and review articles addressing novel biomarkers, techniques, and approaches that will be valuable and helpful for the diagnosis and treatment of kidney diseases.
