Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

The advent of the novel Coronavirus 2019 (COVID-19) pandemic has fuelled technological innovation and led to the development and deployment of new point-of-care screening and diagnostic methods. These methods could be adapted for use for other communicable and non-communicable diseases. The rapid uptake of the newly developed diagnostics requires a systematic approach to bridge the research-to-practice gap. The implementation of science can help to address this need by promoting the systematic uptake of newly developed point-of-care diagnostic services research findings and other evidence-based practices into routine practice in order to improve the quality and effectiveness of these services.
