Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

The journal Education Sciences (ISSN 2227-7102) is currently running a Special Issue entitled "Blended Learning and Teaching in Higher Education: An International Perspective".

Blended learning, in its basest definition, encompasses the possible combination of computer-mediated and face-to-face teaching. It is not a simple juxtaposition of physical presence and technological mediation, but rather a well-studied alternation of the two, aimed at making the most of the various components and designing effective work contexts for both students and teachers.

This Special Issue is aimed at collecting recent experiences, reflections, and empirical evidence regarding ways to effectively blend computer-mediated and face-to-face teaching, by dealing with current open challenges highlighted in the literature.
