Facing rapid greenhouse effect's increase, all we should join the process of energy sources' diversification. In this respect geothermal energy belongs to the most abundant and credible ones, however key factor for reliable estimation of its commercial value is proper distinction between resources and reserves. In the current issue we would like to present papers on geothermal resources' assessment considering different environments (play types) of geothermal energy's occurrence including: shallow, deep, HDR structures and EGS technologies. We also would like to address geothermal resources/reserves classifications and their mutual relations. We invite also the authors specializing in technological novelties of geothermal heat extraction and storage aimed to sustain its reserves. The delineated problems are also related to economical, and socio-geographical factors.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Energies is an international, open access journal in energy engineering and research. The journal publishes original papers, review articles, technical notes, and letters. Authors are encouraged to submit manuscripts which bridge the gaps between research, development and implementation. The journal provides a forum for information on research, innovation, and demonstration in the areas of energy conversion and conservation, the optimal use of energy resources, optimization of energy processes, mitigation of environmental pollutants, and sustainable energy systems.

Author Benefits

Open Access: free for readers, with article processing charges (APC) paid by authors or their institutions.

High Visibility: indexed within Scopus, SCIE (Web of Science), Ei Compendex, RePEc, Inspec, CAPlus / SciFinder, and other databases.

Journal Rank: CiteScore - Q1 (Engineering (miscellaneous))
