Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

This Special Issue “Bioenergy and Forest-Based By-Products” aims to explore biomass-derived technologies and products, the possible new applications and commercial use of the new value-added “green” products, and the development of processes for forest regeneration improvement.

We are looking forward to informing the scientific and industrial communities of the cutting-edge research on the optimized processes for the development of added-value bioproducts and to identifying new markets for the emerging sustainable economy.

We invite you to publish your front-line results on how forest-based wastes can become efficient, sustainable, and economically viable feedstock for clean energy production, bioproducts development, and applications.
