Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue of Forests is intended to cover the following topics to promote the knowledge about the interaction between wind and trees:

- Wind-induced tree movements and biomechanics;
- Tree resistance to wind loading;
- Links between tree behavior under static tree-pulling tests with tree resistance to wind loading;
- Tree thigmomorphogenesis and adaptation to wind climate;
- Post-damage legacy effects and recovery of mechanical stability;
- Impacts of wind disturbances on ecosystem functioning;
- Development and application of wind damage modeling – process-based and statistical;
- Management of wind damage risk from tree to stand and landscape levels.
