Dear Colleagues,

This Special Issue aims to support a deeper understanding of the clinical and scientific characteristics of eating disorders and "new" (dysfunctional) eating behaviors. Theoretical articles, study research protocols, cross-sectional and longitudinal research studies, as well as reviews of the literature and meta-analyses are welcome.

More specifically, papers are invited that address (but are not necessarily limited to) any of the following topics:

- Characteristics and mechanisms of eating disorders (e.g., Anorexia Nervosa, Bulimia Nervosa, and Binge Eating Disorder) and/or "new" dysfunctional eating behaviors (Food addiction, Drunkorexia, and Orthorexia Nervosa) in Western and non-Western societies;
- The relationship that exists between eating disorders and/or the "new" (dysfunctional) eating behaviors;
- Development or adaptation of assessment tools to examine eating disorders and/or the "new" (dysfunctional) eating behaviors;
- Research and cross-cultural conceptualizations of eating disorders and/or the "new" (dysfunctional) eating behaviors.
