Message from the Guest Editors

The digital revolution has changed many habits in every aspect of our personal and professional lives. As doctors, we have been pushed towards a paradigm shift in every aspect of our job, from diagnosis and the clinical approaches to prosthetic manufacturing.

A whole new clinical approach allows the researcher to investigate using new technologies, and to imagine new approaches to screen, follow, and evaluate the progression of different pathologies and clinical problems. Moreover, research on tissue engineering, 3D morphing, 3D scanner, and innovative materials, has made a significant leap forward.

This Special Issue will investigate medicine and dentistry focusing on the use of digital technologies.

This Special Issue of IJERPH welcomes the submission of manuscripts either describing original research or reviewing the scientific literature.
