

International Journal of Geo-Information

Dear Colleagues,

The publisher of the ISPRS International Journal of Geo-Information (herein referred to as ‘the Journal’), MDPI, and ESRI have agreed to jointly present “The Jack Dangermond Award”* to encourage and stimulate submission of high-quality scientific papers by individual authors or groups to the Journal, to promote and advertise the Journal, and to honor the outstanding contributions of Jack Dangermond to research and development in geospatial sciences.

Regulations

The award, which consists of an ISPRS certificate and a grant of USD 10,000, announced its first session winners in 2019 and will be presented every four years from 2022 to the author(s) of an outstanding paper on a topic included in the scope of the Journal. Recipient(s) of the Jack Dangermond Award will be eligible to receive the award only once.

Candidates for the award must be authors of a paper written in English and published exclusively in the Journal during the four-year period from 1 January of a congress year to 31 December of the year prior to the next congress (referred herein as ‘the evaluation period’). For multiple-author papers, the grant shall be split equally among the authors, and certificates will be provided to each.

The Jury shall select the best paper published in the Journal for each year of the evaluation period (referred to herein as ‘best papers’). The author(s) of the best papers shall be announced annually in the Journal, the ISPRS eBulletin and the ISPRS WEB site. Individuals may receive recognition as authors of best papers more than once. At the end of the four-year evaluation period, the Jury shall select the most outstanding paper of the four best papers of the evaluation period for receipt of the Jack Dangermond Award. The authors of the three runner-up best papers shall receive a certificate.

Members of the Jury and the Editor-in-Chief shall not be eligible to receive the Jack Dangermond Award or ‘Best Paper’ award.

The award shall be presented to the recipient(s) by the President of ISPRS and a representative of each sponsor at a plenary session of the congress.

For more information, please refer to the following link.
<https://www.isprs.org/society/awards/dangermond.aspx>

 The name “Jack Dangermond” is used with kind permission from Jack Dangermond.

THE JACK DANGERMOND AWARD FOR THE MOST OUTSTANDING PAPER

Academic Open Access Publishing
since 1996

IJGI Editorial Office
MDPI, St. Alban-Anlage 66
CH-4052, Basel, Switzerland

ijgi@mdpi.com
www.mdpi.com/journal/ijgi

