Natural active compounds derived from various foods has garnered substantial attention in the fields of health, nutrition, and pharmaceutical research. In this context, these compounds' antioxidant, antinociceptive, and anti-inflammatory activities hold great promise for use in preventive and therapeutic applications.

This Special Issue is dedicated to unraveling the intricate interplay between these bioactive agents and their impacts on human health. Their multifaceted roles in modulating cellular processes and mitigating oxidative stress, pain, and inflammation present a frontier ripe for exploration. By delving into their synergistic effects, bioavailability, and clinical implications, we aim to foster a comprehensive understanding of the potential benefits that natural food-derived products offer.

The International Journal of Molecular Sciences (IJMS, ISSN 1422-0067) is an open access journal, which was established in 2000. The journal aims to provide a forum for scholarly research on a range of topics, including biochemistry, molecular and cell biology, molecular biophysics, molecular medicine, and all aspects of molecular research in chemistry. IJMS publishes both original research and review articles, and regularly publishes special issues to highlight advances at the cutting edge of research. We invite you to read recent articles published in IJMS and consider publishing your next paper with us.

Author Benefits

Open Access: free for readers, with article processing charges (APC) paid by authors or their institutions.

High Visibility: indexed within Scopus, SCIE (Web of Science), PubMed, PMC, MEDLINE, Embase, CAPlus / SciFinder, and other databases.

Journal Rank: JCR - Q1 (Biochemistry & Molecular Biology) / CiteScore - Q1 (Inorganic Chemistry)
