Message from the Guest Editors

Ionic liquids (ILs) are at the forefront of modern materials research and development, and virtually every field of application has at least seen attempts of using ILs for advanced materials design. Although not all attempts have been equally successful, ILs are among the most versatile and promising materials or material components in today's advanced materials. Fields of interest encompass energy, health, catalysis, environment, and many other areas. The Special Issue aims at highlighting recent key developments of the field and invites high profile contributions from all areas related to ionic liquids for advanced materials design and application.

This Special Issue is cooperating with the international conference ILMAT IV (<https://www.ilmat.net/>). All speakers presenting a paper at this conference can submit a manuscript for publication.

The International Journal of Molecular Sciences (IJMS, ISSN 1422-0067) is an open access journal, which was established in 2000. The journal aims to provide a forum for scholarly research on a range of topics, including biochemistry, molecular and cell biology, molecular biophysics, molecular medicine, and all aspects of molecular research in chemistry. IJMS publishes both original research and review articles, and regularly publishes special issues to highlight advances at the cutting edge of research. We invite you to read recent articles published in IJMS and consider publishing your next paper with us.
