Message from the Guest Editors

As an independent, third sector membership and advocacy body for the field of restorative practice, the Restorative Justice Council provides a voice on the widespread use of all forms of restorative practice, including restorative justice.

We are examining new and innovative applications of restorative justice and restorative practices, as well as providing fresh evidence in support of existing practices and schemes. The scope of submissions is therefore broad. We are seeking submissions that detail or evaluate new forms of restorative justice and practice, examine innovative schemes, and reflect on projects in areas where restorative work is less well established. We also welcome submissions contributing to the evidence base for restorative work.

We are keen to receive submissions from both academics as well from practitioners engaged in restorative work. For these practitioners, we are offering the chance to pair with academics in the field who can provide support in the writing process. If you are a practitioner interested in contributing and would like to discuss the opportunity to pair with an academic, please contact one of the Guest Editors for this Special Edition.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Laws is an international, open access journal featuring rigorous scholarship on critical developments in governance, courts, agencies, and social order. Analysis and synthesis, theory and practice, and empirical and doctrinal work have appeared in the journal; contributions that bridge these traditional boundaries are particularly welcome. The social sciences and humanities generate insights both from and for the legal system. While theory grounds Laws in a timeless dialogue shaped by traditions of inquiry, legal practice ensures that scholars are addressing pressing problems. Both normative and positive scholarship can aid policymakers, judges, and agency officials. Laws brings together the work of theorists and practitioners, and a diverse range of empirical researchers, to promote the progress of foundational legal norms.
