Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

This Special Issue aims to provide a comprehensive update on vestibular neuritis, a condition causing sudden vertigo due to inflammation of the VIII cranial nerve, the vestibular nerve. It delves into recent advancements in diagnosis, medical and rehabilitation treatment modalities, and insights into the pathophysiology of this debilitating disorder. The primary goal is to synthesize the latest research findings and clinical practices concerning vestibular neuritis and to bridge the gap between research and clinical practice, fostering a collaborative approach to improve patient care and management of this condition and further the understanding of vestibular neuritis across multidisciplinary fields.

This Special Issue serves as a valuable resource for healthcare professionals, researchers, and clinicians involved in neurology, otolaryngology, and vestibular sciences. By consolidating up-to-date information and diverse perspectives, it aims to advance the knowledge base, foster collaborative efforts, and ultimately enhance patient care in the realm of vestibular neuritis.
