Dear Colleagues,

Urology is a part of health care that deals with disorders of both the male and female urinary tract (such as the kidneys, ureters, bladders, and urethra). In addition, it also contains knowledge about the male organs that are closely related to the birth-giving (such as the penis, testes, scrotum, prostate, etc.). Since health problems in these body parts can happen to everyone, urologic oncology is critically important and worth noticing. The special issue collects original or review articles focusing on knowledge about genetic or genomic findings which can help further understand all types of urological cancer. The digging outcome of urological novel markers is still far from satisfying. Articles in genome-wide association analysis (GWAS), genotype-phenotype correlation, and reviews are welcomed.
