Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue offers an open access forum that aims at bringing together a collection of review and original research articles addressing a deeper understanding of the expanding field such as the use of substances of natural origin in animal feed or using different animal models. In this regard, we are welcoming contributions that may cover the effect of natural substances to the animal in various specific areas. We look forward to providing a new aspect in the extended field of animal nutrition and health with direct impact on human health.
