Message from the Guest Editor

Inflammatory bowel disease burden is increasing worldwide at an accelerated rate and thus represents a tremendous burden for society. Fortunately, IBD is one of most lively IBD research topics in gastroenterology. Furthermore, drug development also followed many of the unmet needs in the field.

The aim of this Special issue will be to report on recent findings in the field of IBD with a special focus on real world evidence on the efficacy of different treatments for IBD. We also welcome epidemiological reports that would help understand the burden and management of IBD worldwide.

Authors can submit research papers, short reports, reviews, systematic reviews, and meta-analyses.
