Dear Colleagues:

The recent outbreak of a novel coronavirus and its variants responsible for the coronavirus pandemic disease 2019 (COVID-19), which has caused infections with a high mortality rate around the world. Our understanding of COVID-19, including its detection, prevention (vaccination), and the various approaches to its treatment, have been increased daily for last three years. As a result, several COVID-19 vaccines have been approved for general or emergency use; however, still no specific antiviral drugs are available for the treatment of SARS-CoV-2. This warrants the search for new effective antiviral therapeutics against coronaviral infections. The present Special Issue of Molecules, titled 'Advances in Understanding of SARS-CoV-2 Three Years Since the Outbreak of COVID-19', aims to compile the latest knowledge on SARS-CoV-2 needed for the potential treatment of COVID-19.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

As the premier open access journal dedicated to experimental organic chemistry, and now in its 25th year of publication, the papers published in Molecules span from classical synthetic methodology to natural product isolation and characterization, as well as physicochemical studies and the applications of these molecules as pharmaceuticals, catalysts and novel materials. Pushing the boundaries of the discipline, we invite papers on multidisciplinary topics bridging biochemistry, biophysics and materials science, as well as timely reviews and topical issues on cutting edge fields in all these areas.
