Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

The field of nutrition is continuously evolving, with growing awareness of the significant impact diet has on health and well-being. Simultaneously, the digital health landscape is expanding, offering new avenues for personalized health management. This Special Issue aims to explore the integration of digital health technologies into the realm of nutrition and dietary management. We invite researchers and experts in nutrition, health informatics, and digital health to contribute their insights, studies, and innovations in this emerging field.

Topics of interest:

Nutrition tracking apps; Personalized dietary recommendations; Behavioral change interventions; Nutrigenomics and genetic profiling; Telehealth and telemedicine; Big Data and analytics; Blockchain in food traceability; Ethical and privacy considerations

We welcome original research articles, reviews, case studies, and opinion pieces that contribute to the understanding of how digital health is transforming the field of nutrition. Submissions should adhere to the journal's guidelines for manuscript preparation and formatting.
