Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

The current Special Issue is concerned with the science and clinical application of a wide range of biomaterials. The scope of the Special Issue covers the characterization and analysis of biological, physical and chemical properties of novel biosystems in the field of pharmaceutical technology. This includes drug design as well as the evaluation of novel biomedical components and delivery systems that can be applied in modern therapeutic or diagnostic procedures.

For this Special Issue, we invite the submission of manuscripts focusing on the technology of biopharmaceutics, biomaterial synthesis and nanovector construction, including research on self-assembly systems, interaction of carriers with host molecules, toxicology, immunology, pharmacokinetics, medical engineering, diagnosis and therapy.

Original research papers and review articles are welcome for submission.
