Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

Biopolymers are used in many potential applications, such as biofuels, biomedicine and biocomposites. With several organisms (microorganisms, marine animal, plants and algae) offering various biopolymer sources, new advances in terms of their synthesis, extraction, modification and functionalisation are expected to improve their application potential in many fields (the pharmaceutical, cosmetic and food industries, bio-ink and tissue engineering, etc.)

This Special Issue aims to collect recent and original advances in this field, focusing mainly on Carbohydrates, Bioplastics, Lignins and other naturally abundant biopolymers. The Special Issue will include, but is not limited to:

- Extraction processes and purification;
- Characterization and structural analysis;
- Modification/functionalisation processes—grafting, chemical modification, etc.;
- Industrial applications/evaluations;
- Physico-chemical or biological activities.
