Message from the Guest Editors

With the success of the previous Special Issue, “Non-thermal Technologies in Food Science”, we decided to organize a second Special Issue on this subject: “Non-thermal Technologies in Food Science, Volume II”. This Special Issue on “Non-thermal Technologies in Food Science, Volume II” is seeking original and high-quality papers that focus on the latest advances in the use of non-thermal technologies in the development of diverse food processes, healthy and nutritious products, and novel food ingredients. The topics include, but are not limited to the following:

- High hydrostatic pressure;
