Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

The praxis of a public theology in the current global setting anticipates differently structured public domains, whether or not a theological voice is readily heard or is required to secure that right.

This Special Issue aims to explore how the practice of a public theology is performed in particular contexts that are both geographical in expression (hence local) and representative of global public issues. As a result, original research articles and reviews are welcome. Research areas may include (but are not limited to) the following topics:

- Climate change/the Anthropocene;
- War/peace;
- Democracy/fake claims.

We look forward to receiving your contributions.
