Message from the Guest Editors

In this Special Issue, original research articles and reviews are welcome. Research areas may include (but are not limited to) the following:

- religious leaders and movements' acceptance or non-acceptance of secular political structures;
- religious leaders and movements' strategies towards participation in the political arena of countries with secular political systems;
- religious thinkers and theologians' theories about or in response to the idea of political secularism;
- secular governments' approaches to the role of religion in the public and political spheres;
- comparisons between the attitudes and strategies of different religious movements towards political secularism;
- challenges to secular political systems caused by the presence of religion in the political arena;
- opportunities for secular political structures to benefit from the presence of religion in the public and political spheres.

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community - disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
