The Internet of Health Things (IoHT) is the application of Internet of Things (IoT) concepts to the area of healthcare. The IoHT consists of interconnected objects with the capacity to exchange and process data, focusing on improving patient health. Among the areas involved in the IoHT, we highlight research related to the acquisition, storage, processing, and presentation of collected health data. Another important topic is the infrastructure for managing all IoHT processes.

This Special Issue addresses all research that applies the Internet of Things to the healthcare area.

- Internet of Health Things
- Internet of Medical Things
- wearables
- healthcare sensors and actuators
- healthcare interoperability
- healthcare protocols
- healthcare-applied machine and deep learning
- federated and swarm learning
- edge computing
- fog and cloud computing
- blockchain

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Sensors is a leading journal devoted to fast publication of the latest achievements of technological developments and scientific research in the huge area of physical, chemical and biochemical sensors, including remote sensing and sensor networks. Both experimental and theoretical papers are published, including all aspects of sensor design, technology, proof of concept and application. Sensors organizes Special Issues devoted to specific sensing areas and applications each year.

Author Benefits

Open Access : free for readers, with article processing charges (APC) paid by authors or their institutions.
High Visibility: indexed within Scopus, SCIE (Web of Science), PubMed, MEDLINE, PMC, Ei Compendex, Inspec, Astrophysics Data System, and other databases.
