Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue, entitled Regional Carbon Dioxide Emissions Markets, is dedicated to the design, regulation, and role of regional carbon markets. In this sense, we encourage original submissions, including review articles as well as theoretical and empirical contributions, related to the the following themes:

- How should regional carbon quotas be allocated in the light of current social development requirements?
- How can we design trading systems for carbon markets for different regions and different stages?
- Which industries should the carbon trading market focus on?
- The possible impacts on social and economic development in a scenario where carbon trading and carbon tax are implemented.
- How can we establish a cross-regional carbon emissions trading market?
- How can we regulate and manage the carbon trading market?
- How can green finance promote the development of the carbon market in the context of carbon neutrality?
- How can regional carbon trading promote the harmonious development of society, economy, and environment in the context of carbon neutrality?
- Other topics related to carbon emission reduction.
