Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

What role do local food systems play in helping to transform pathways to sustainability? Are there considerations that need further exploration? What works and why? What are the connection points between community development and local food systems for fostering sustainability? We seek manuscripts for this Special Issue addressing these and other questions about the interface and connection between sustainability and local food systems. These include research papers, communications, and review articles. Sustainability is an interdisciplinary journal, and we encourage manuscripts that offer perspectives across domains of community development and local food systems.

Abstract submission deadline: August 31, 2022
