Message from the Guest Editors

While sustainability is key topic for all sectors, the media and creative industries face particular challenges regarding their future.

This Special Issue is designed to spotlight contemporary research from business and management perspectives on how these companies are dealing with the present. Papers answering the following questions, or similar themes, are welcome:

What are the relationships between sustainability and audience engagement?

What role does culture and creativity play in the business strategies of the creative industries and media companies?

What are the implications of technology and innovation in the sustainable development of media companies?

Is the increase in new startups and SMEs that offer communication and marketing services for companies sustainable?

Are the current communication and marketing strategies sustainable within a VUCA scenario and the post-COVID-19 era?

How should sustainable development of the creative industries be carried out?

How can we improve sustainability communication in media companies and creative industries?

What is the influence of creative industries in the development of sustainable businesses?
