Message from the Guest Editors

The planned special issue intends to capture current trends in interdisciplinary mobility research, focusing in particular on methodological innovation and recent advances in bringing together researchers from different disciplines. We are particularly interested in contributions that adopt a critical perspective on disciplinary divisions in mobility research and explicitly address interdisciplinarity and cross-disciplinary integration in relation to one or more of the following topics:

- Innovative efforts towards interdisciplinarity and deep cross-disciplinary integration beyond multidisciplinary, esp. between social science, technical and natural science disciplines as well as within these disciplinary fields
- Multi-method approaches to mobility research that explicitly seek to integrate qualitative and quantitative methods of inquiry
- Longitudinal and biographical research that considers trends over time, including changes in people's mobility practices across the life course
- Behaviour change studies that focus explicitly on transport policy initiatives and their effects on mobility
